and ladies, all good children, bei met together, went on a viſit to M Lovewell's, a very kind lady, wi was always very happy whenever was convenient to entertain little folk of ſuch a deſcription.

Though the weather was fair whi they came abroad, growing gloomy and ſnow at length beginning to fall, there was very little paſtime to b expected out of doors; which is often the caſe, as my young reader muſt know, at that time of the Year.

However

However, they played at a gre many pretty, little, harmleſs ſpor by which they paſſed the time awa And when they were tired of th Mrs. Lovewell propoſed ſhewing th her library and her pictures.

In the firſt of theſe they fou many good and pretty books, eſpecially little books for childr ſome of which the lady made th a preſent of, and they were hig delighted with them.

Among the pictures the firſt ſhowed to them was the creation

PETER PRATEWELL Pretty Tales and Pretty Things LONDON, [1797] HASKELL COLLECTION, THE BODLEIAN LIBRARY Oc